Topographic maps of the entire state, back roads, outdoor recreation

As a travel atlas this is in a class by itself as it shows all of the little back roads so often omitted from travel maps. However, my primary use of this gazetteer is for another purpose. I am a lifelong student of American History. Nothing touches the detail of these gazetteers in enabling you to focus on all terrain aspects of battles or trails as well as historic sites in general.

Great, now I will not get lost.

Excellent

Was exactly what we were looking for and was well worth the money.

This is a great atlas for our home state for exploring the off road places! You can use it for the sport of fishing !

Whenever I'm anticipating spending a considerable amount of time exploring a state I buy one of these gazetteers. If all you're going to do is travel through the state on the interstate or a major highway a standard road map will do just fine. But for serious exploration, this atlas and gazetteer works much better. And so when I knew that I would be vacationing in Indiana I bought the gazetteer. Not only does it show the highways, but it also shows county roads, section-line roads, and the like. This enables a person to find shortcuts from one place to another or even to access out of the way places that a standard road map doesn't even show. Plus, the gazetteer indicates various topographical features, small rivers and creeks, and even small lakes and ponds that don't show up on a regular map.

DeLorme's new Indiana Atlas & Gazetteer should be a big help in tracing Indiana's tributary streams to Lake Michigan. It features incredibly detailed maps of the entire state, showing all its major highways, back roads, lakes, streams, and rivers in an easy-to-use book format. Topographic shading and GPS grids add an extra level of detail and usability to these maps to satisfy even the most avid outdoors people. The full-size, 11 X 15 1/2-inch paperback book is perfect for the car or truck, RV, fishing boat, or backpack. Bill Takacs, MidWest Outdoors Indiana, Feb., 1999
