Americanization, Acculturation, And Ethnic Identity: THE NISEI GENERATION IN HAWAII (Asian American Experience)

Synopsis

Eileen Tamura examines the forms that U.S. hysteria over "Americanization" took after World War I in Hawaii, where the children of Japanese immigrants - the Nisei - were targets of widespread discrimination. She offers a wealth of original source material, using personal accounts and statistical data to create an essential resource for students of American ethnic history and U.S. race and class relations.
