

The book was found

For A Proper Home: Housing Rights In The Margins Of Urban Chile, 1960-2010 (Pitt Latin American Series)

Synopsis

From 1967 to 1973, a period that culminated in the socialist project of Salvador Allende, nearly 400,000 low-income Chileans illegally seized parcels of land on the outskirts of Santiago. Remarkably, today almost all of these individuals live in homes with property titles. As Edward Murphy shows, this transformation came at a steep price, through an often-violent political and social struggle that continues to this day. In analyzing the causes and consequences of this struggle, Murphy reveals a crucial connection between homeownership and understandings of proper behavior and governance. This link between property and propriety has been at the root of a powerful, contested urban politics central to both social activism and urban development projects. Through projects of reform, revolution, and reaction, a right to housing and homeownership has been a significant symbol of governmental benevolence and poverty reduction. Under Pinochet's neoliberalism, subsidized housing and slum eradication programs displaced many squatters, while awarding them homes of their own. This process, in addition to ongoing forms of activism, has permitted the vast majority of squatters to live in homes with property titles, a momentous change of the past half-century. This triumph is tempered by the fact that today the urban poor struggle with high levels of unemployment and underemployment, significant debt, and a profoundly segregated and hostile urban landscape. They also find it more difficult to mobilize than in the past, and as homeowners they can no longer rally around the cause of housing rights. Citing cultural theorists from Marx to Foucault, Murphy directly links the importance of home ownership and property rights among Santiago's urban poor to definitions of Chilean citizenship and propriety. He explores how the deeply embedded liberal belief system of individual property ownership has shaped political, social, and physical landscapes in the city. His approach sheds light on the role that social movements and the gendered contours of home life have played in the making of citizenship. It also illuminates processes through which squatters have received legally sanctioned homes of their own, a phenomenon of critical importance in cities throughout much of Latin America and the Global South.

Book Information

Series: Pitt Latin American Series

Paperback: 360 pages

Publisher: University of Pittsburgh Press; 1 edition (January 5, 2015)

Language: English

ISBN-10: 0822963116

ISBN-13: 978-0822963110

Product Dimensions: 6 x 0.9 x 9 inches

Shipping Weight: 1.1 pounds (View shipping rates and policies)

Average Customer Review: Be the first to review this item

Best Sellers Rank: #231,529 in Books (See Top 100 in Books) #20 in Books > History > Americas > South America > Chile #195 in Books > Politics & Social Sciences > Politics & Government > International & World Politics > Caribbean & Latin American #586 in Books > Politics & Social Sciences > Sociology > Urban

Customer Reviews

“For a Proper Home makes a major contribution to understanding the politics of modern Chile and should enjoy a wide readership. Its ambitious scope, interdisciplinarity, and focus on the links between activism and consumption represent a cutting edge for historical studies of Latin America.”
•American Historical Review
“In examining the history of struggles over low-income housing in twentieth-century Santiago, Murphy makes original, poignant, and compelling contributions to a range of fields: histories of property, housing, state formation, urban space, and citizenship, among others. . . . Subtle, well-reasoned, humane and deeply researched, this book should be required reading for scholars across the social sciences and humanities.”
•Journal of Historical Geography
“For a Proper Home offers readers a compelling, nuanced account of the entangled nature of propriety, politics, and citizenship in the second half of the 20th and the first decades of the 21st century. (It) serves as an example for any ethnographer seriously committed to historical analysis, as well as for any historian interested in deepening their work through ethnography.(A) complex and engaging text, suitable for advanced undergraduates and graduate students in anthropology as well as history, urban planning, political science, and Latin American studies.”
•City and Society
“This fascinating view of Chilean history contributes to a better understanding of how the country has experimented with different models of social and economic development and how poor citizens have crafted their own views of the state and democracy, one that includes their right to own homes. Highly recommended.”
•Choice
“This book reoriented how I think about Chilean history in a fundamental way. . . . [It] adds layers of nuance and insight to existing scholarship on Chile. It will also appeal to those unfamiliar with Chilean history because it is so beautifully written.”
•The Americas: A Quarterly Review of Latin American History
“Edward Murphy provides an engaging, well-researched, and bottom-up historical account of low-income residents in Santiago, Chile, from the 1960s to 2010. By examining the intersections between citizenship and home ownership, Murphy reveals how Santiago's housing movement became both a form of urban insurgency and a consolidation of traditional private property rights. . . . From the fascinating case of Santiago, the author also raises critical questions about urban growth in the global South and the different and similar ways that squatters and poor urban residents beyond Chile have been able to access a home.

•Hispanic American Historical Review

“Essential reading for anyone who wants to have, in a single book, a complete and very detailed critical depiction of the last 50 years of Chile's housing and urban struggles.

•International Journal of Urban and Regional Research

“Murphy has written a fascinating book. . . . In making the quest for a home central to his analysis of Chilean politics, he has reimagined Chilean politics.

•Anthropological Quarterly

Edward Murphy is assistant professor of history and global urban studies at Michigan State University. He is the coeditor of The Housing Question: Tensions, Continuities, and Contingencies in the Modern City and Anthrohistory: Unsettling Knowledge, Questioning Discipline.

Download to continue reading...

For a Proper Home: Housing Rights in the Margins of Urban Chile, 1960-2010 (Pitt Latin American Series) A Beginner's Urban Survival Prepping Guide: Basic Urban Self Defense Guide And Survival Tips in the Prepping Urban Environment(The Prepper's Urban survival ... A Beginner's Urban Survival Prepping Race and the Chilean Miracle: Neoliberalism, Democracy, and Indigenous Rights (Pitt Latin American Series) Making the Second Ghetto: Race and Housing in Chicago 1940-1960 (Historical Studies of Urban America) Urban Homesteading: Become a Self Sustainable Urban Homesteader to Get off the Grid, Grow Food, and Free Yourself (Urban Homesteading: A Complete Guide ... a Self Sustainable Urban Homesteader) Leadership From the Margins: Women and Civil Society Organizations in Argentina, Chile, and El Salvador A Primer on U.S. Housing Markets and Housing Policy (Areuea Monograph Series) Affordable Housing and Urban Redevelopment in the United States: Learning from Failure and Success (Urban Affairs Annual Reviews) Left in Transformation: Uruguayan Exiles and the Latin American Human Rights Network, 1967 -1984 (Latin American Studies) Making the Second Ghetto: Race and Housing in Chicago, 1940-1960 (Interdisciplinary Perspectives on Modern History) Dividing Hispaniola: The Dominican Republic's Border Campaign against Haiti, 1930-1961 (Pitt Latin American Series) A Revolution Aborted: The Lessons of Grenada (Pitt Latin American Series) The Costa Rican Womens

Movement: A Reader (Pitt Latin American Series) At the Fall of Somoza (Pitt Latin American Series)
Black Labor on a White Canal: Panama, 1904-1981 (Pitt Latin American Series) Unresolved
Tensions: Bolivia Past and Present (Pitt Latin American Series) Acting Inca: National Belonging in Early Twentieth-Century Bolivia (Pitt Latin American Series) Myths of Harmony: Race and Republicanism during the Age of Revolution, Colombia, 1795-1831 (Pitt Latin American Series) City at the Center of the World: Space, History, and Modernity in Quito (Pitt Latin American Series)
Highland Indians and the State in Modern Ecuador (Pitt Latin American Series)

Contact Us

DMCA

Privacy

FAQ & Help