For educators following the school reform movement of the past ten years, this collection offers a fresh perspective. Editor Kane assembles more than 20 essays on the characteristics of independent schools, their cultural milieu, and the viewpoints of a wide range of people within the context of independent school education. Contributors include teachers, nationally known educators such as Diane Ravitch and Robert Coles, and former students. One of the latter is author John Irving, who writes about his novels and their connection to his experience at Phillips Exeter Academy. The book is informative and enlightening, both for those unfamiliar with independent schools and those who are not and who want to know how the national school debate will affect them. Recommended for education collections.- Nancy E. Zuwiyya, Binghamton City Sch. Dist. , N.Y.Copyright 1992 Reed Business Information, Inc.
